Explanation of Risk

Explanation on Credit Risk

Credit Risk is assessed based on the credit rating that indicates the level on which an issuer can meet its financial commitments, taking into consideration the past performance and the financial position of the issuer. Below is a summary of credit rating of long-term bonds.

Credit Rating	TRIS	Fitch	Moody's	S&P	Explanation
Investment Grade	AAA	AAA(thai)	Aaa	AAA	This is the highest possible rating assigned to an issuer's bonds by credit rating agencies. Investment of this grade has lowest risk of default.
	AA	AA(thai)	Aa	AA	This is the second highest rating. Investment of this grade has very low risk of default.
	A	A(thai)	A	A	Investment of this grade has low risk of default.
	BBB	BBB(thai)	Baa	BBB	Investment of this grade has moderate risk of default.
Below Investment Grade	Below BBB	Below BBB(thai)	Below Baa	Below BBB	Investment of this grade has high risk of default.

Explanation on Market Risk

- Market Risk is the possibility for an investor to experience losses resulting from changes in interest rates that depend on external factors such as investment and economic conditions, political factors in the issuer's country or other country. Fixed-income instrument prices and interest rates move in opposite directions. For example, if the interest rate in the money market increases, prices of newly issued instruments will be high and therefore instruments that have been issued previously will be traded at lower prices. Mutual funds of long portfolio duration have higher chance of experiencing changes in prices than mutual funds of shorter portfolio duration.
- Market risk is the possibility that the value of securities in which the mutual fund invests may increase or decrease due to external factors such as investment climate, domestic and foreign politics. This is measured in terms of standard deviation (SD) of the mutual fund. If the SD is high, the fund is likely to experience fluctuate in prices of securities.

■ Explanation on Currency Risk

Currency Risk is the possibility that changes in exchange rate will affect the value of investment units. For example, if a mutual fund invests in securities denominated in US Dollar during Thai Baht depreciation and the units are subsequently sold when Thai Baht appreciates, the mutual fund will receive lower return in Thai Baht. On the other hand, if the same fund invests in securities denominated in US Dollar during Thai Baht appreciation and the units are subsequently sold when Thai Baht depreciates, the mutual fund will receive higher return in Thai Baht. Therefore, currency hedging techniques as follows are key tools to manage such risk.

Fully-hedged: Investors have no exposure to currency risk.

Partially-hedged with fixed ratio: Investors may be exposed to certain level of currency risk.

Hedging at discretion of the fund manager: Investors may be exposed to currency risk because it is the discretion of the fund manager whether to use a currency hedging technique.

No hedging: Investors will experience currency risk.

■ Explanation on High Issuer Concentration Risk

This risk comes from investing more than 10% of the fund's NAV in one issuer, party, or other person who has obligations under the instruments or the contracts.

Concentration risk does not include investment in the following assets:

1. Thai government bonds;
2. Investment-grade foreign government bonds; and
3. Investment-grade deposits or cash-equivalent instruments of a depository or an issuer.
